“Hidden restaurants. A first for us and certainly won't be the last. What a concept, what delights lay in store not only through the exquisite food, the beautiful surroundings but the fabulous company of interesting diners whom I had never met before.

A warm welcome awaited from the moment the door was opened, a smiling Sylvia welcomed us into her home like a long lost friend. Great excitement on hearing the door bell ring and waiting to see and to meet the other diners as they arrived in ones and two's.

The aroma from the kitchen, the tantalising canapés awaiting tasting. As the lunch guests arrive more and more canapés arrive and each is lovelier than the other, asparagus, duck, anchovies, onion, garlic, each little delight a storm on the taste buds. The homemade pastry would have taken first prize at the women's rural! Crumbly, light and tasty, so delicate yet each little pastry case able to hold their delightful contents, generous contents, tantalisingly tasty contents.

Mains.... outstanding, fresh, honest, down to earth food prepared within the chefs words “tender loving care.” I felt the food displayed the qualities of home, earthy French dishes not too presumptuous but utterly scrumptious. The flavour of each dish rang true and was not masked and muddled by endless ingredients. One particular dish, the stuffed cabbage, yes indeed stuffed cabbage was a masterpiece. Only an excellent chef could make a lowly cabbage look, taste delicious and make you want more and more!

Deserts were outstanding again the decadence of the fantastic chocolate cake to the immense creaminess and texture of rice pudding, an apple pie again with the most light crumbly pastry, coffee, petit fours.

Good company, bring your own wine, great hosting, home from home, unique, warm inviting, pleasurable experience can also be yours. I urge you to try it out. A private booking of the Table for ten can also be made for a special occasion. You won't believe the price, you won't be aggrieved by the price you will however be desperate to return”.
